EFFECT: (1) Modifies the proposed definition of "cost prohibitive" in the underlying bill by specifying that the term means that the cost to a property owner to connect to a sanitary sewer system exceeds ten thousand dollars and is 25 or more percent higher than the total installed cost of a site-specific, approved on-site sewage system, rather than exceeds the total installed cost of a site-specific, approved on-site sewage system by the greater of either 15 percent or five thousand dollars.

(2) Deletes provisions in the underlying bill requiring the Department of Commerce to, by November 1, 2015, update its guidance to sewer system service providers with respect to factors that it recommends the providers consider when determining whether to exercise their authority to mandate connections to sewer systems.

(3) Makes a technical change.
